FUNDAMENTAL GUIDING CONCEPTS FOR THE REDUCTION OF THE IMPACT ON THE ECOSYSTEM

The greatest impact that a project can have on its environment starts from the design, factors such as respect for the environment, existing vegetation, correct orientation for the use of lighting without excessive use of energy, use of natural ventilation and implementation of technology. We take advantage of our experience in the design of buildings with LEED certification to apply those that can give us the greatest efficiency.

ECOSYSTEM CONSERVATION

- Smaller footprint of the building, greater green area
- Endemic vegetation, less maintenance, energy and water consumption
- Use of permeable materials on exterior floors
- Integration to a local architecture language

ENERGY SAVING

- Design of facades for better lighting, 90% of spaces naturally illuminated
- Facades designed for efficient solar control and reduce the need for a/c
- Use of low consumption lighting
- Anti-hurricane windows with a high level of insulation (PVC with laminated glass for solar control)
- Wall materials with a high level of thermal and acoustic insulation.
- Design of natural ventilation in interior spaces.
- Inverter cooling systems
- High efficiency pumping systems

UNIVERSAL ACCESSIBILITY

- Easy access to all areas of the project for people with disabilities
- Interior spaces with ease of adaptation for people with disabilities

WATER TREATMENT

- Immediate water heating systems
- Low consumption toilet
- Taps with aerators
- Endemic vegetation, less need for water for irrigation

WASTE REDUCTION

- Infrastructure for waste separation

C

El supra mundo, los cuatro cielos enfocados a el bienestar, la abundancia, la convivencia y el placer. Nos abren una vista infinita hacia la inmensidad de la selva, el mar y nuestros antepasados.

The supraworld, the four heavens focused on well-being, abundance, coexistence and pleasure. They open an infinite view towards the immensity of the jungle, the sea and our ancestors.
